Global Warming
by Patrick Morrison

Much is said these days about the issue of global warming. We are told that, because of increased burning of fossil fuels, escalating usage of harmful pesticides and other detrimental farming practices that lead to increased erosion and pollution, and the exponential increase of the human population and the subsequent need to convert woodlands and grasslands into suitable habitat for people to survive, these practices are slowly increasing the ambient temperature around us. This process of global warming is causing polar ice caps to melt, colder climates to become more temperate, and warmer climates to become almost unsuitable for most life to exist. Science wants us to believe the supposed overwhelming evidence that our actions are destroying the earth. I will agree that we could all do a better job of being good stewards of this beautiful world that our Creator has made for us to dwell upon. We should seek to take only what we need and we should clean up our messes. But, have man's actions somehow set off a catastrophic chain of events that will doom our world, unless we suddenly change course? Yes, and no. It is true that our choices have doomed this world in which we live to destruction. And yes, said destruction will be caused by global warming, but not the way modern science has depicted.

Man's choice to sin against God's law set into action the demise of all physical, temporal things around us (Genesis 3). This means that physical life will ultimately come to an end, as well as the demise of everything within the physical universe. Peter reveals for us what will become of this world at the end of time: "The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering toward us, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance. But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up" (2 Pet.3:9-10). Early in the history of the human race, man's wickedness had become so great that God decided to destroy the world by means of a flood and rebuild the human population by means of Noah and his family (Genesis 6-9). However, after the great worldwide flood, the Almighty promised never to destroy the earth with water again, and he gave a sign to remind us of this promise—the rainbow (Gen.9:15-16). The rainbow should always be to us a reminder of God's goodness, but it should also remind us of his severity (Rom.11:22). We must remember that our God is longsuffering, but at some point that longsuffering will be exhausted. When that time comes, there will be global warming of epic proportions, but no one will be here to record such for the annals of history. History will cease in the day of this global warming, for it will be the day of our Lord's return.

When God created this world, he made it as an idyllic paradise in which man could dwell forever and could enjoy the uninterrupted fellowship and communion with the Creator. However, sin soon separated man from God, and doomed this world to destruction. God, through Jesus, then prepared us a glorious residence in heaven (John 14:1-6). We long for that day to come, when we can see our God and our Savior face to face. This world is no longer our home. We are merely passing through on our journey toward eternity in heaven. The day is coming when this old world is going to melt with fervent heat. Let's not put down roots in this world, lest we perish with it when our Lord comes!
