Today: Write Your Own Story

I've started several sentences for this edition and have deleted them. For the first time since I started writing the Daily View, my mind is blank; sort of empty, like the ghost town in the photo. I have plenty of experiences and stories that I could share, so that's not it. I'll just say that last week was busy and somewhat stressful as the elders try to get our at-the-building services up and running, so I find that my mind is in a sort of Monday-ville.

I'm not complaining and I hope I'm not trying to impress you with how "busy" I am (I feel it tacky to do that, if the aim is to make think you are really important). I love being busy. I just don't have a lot of mental energy today. In fact, it's taking me longer to type a sentence today.

So, I suggest you write your own story and find a spiritual application for it. That's been helpful for me. Try it! And if you come with something that might be helpful to others, I'll print it here. That would be great.

Meanwhile, I don't know if this verse necessarily applies to anything I've said here, but it's one of my favorites and may give you something to think about. I comes from II Corinthians 3:2-3.

You yourselves are our letter of recommendation, written on our hearts, to be known and read by all. And you show that you are a letter from Christ delivered by us, written not with ink but with the Spirit of the living God, not on tablets of stone but on tablets of human hearts.
